Its greatest length being 21½ miles, and its greatest breadth 11 miles, and its land area 86,618 acres or 135 square miles. Most of this area is occupied by mountains, those to the left forming part of the Monadhliath range, and those to its right the Grampians. Alvie has a Post-office (Lynwilg) under Aviemore.

A Coast Parish at the north-east of Inverness-shire. It has an area of 3824 acres, contains the Village of Campbelltown, Fort-George, and has a Post-office under its own name, with money-order, savings bank, and telegraph departments.

Boleskine.

The Parish of Boleskine stretches along from the Pass of Inverfarigaig, on the south side of Loch-Ness, to the east end of Loch-Oich, embracing Stratherrick, Falls of Foyers, part of Invermoriston, and the Village of Fort-Augustus. Sheep farming is the chief source of wealth, from thirty to forty thousand sheep being pastured here. Arable land varies greatly in kind and quality.

Bracadale.

This Parish is situated in the south-west of Skye, and has a Post-office under Portree. Its extreme length is about 20 miles, and its extreme breadth about 8 miles, and its area, exclusive of foreshore, of water, and of waste tracts, is about 73,189 acres. About 4878 acres are arable, and about 68,311 are hill pasture.

Cawdor.

This Parish is partly in Inverness-shire and partly in Nairnshire. It contains the Village of Cawdor, 5½ miles south-west of Nairn, and has an area of 29,366 acres. The arable and planted portions occupy little more than one-sixth of the entire area, the remainder is pasture or moor. The soil of the plain is mostly an alluvial loam, resting on a substratum of sand and gravel, and rarely of great fertility; elsewhere the soil is generally moorish and poor. Cawdor has a Post-office under Nairn.

Cromdale.

This Parish is chiefly in Elginshire, but partly in Inverness-shire. Its utmost length is 16 miles, and its utmost breadth $11\frac{3}{8}$ miles, and has an area of 64,253 acres. The soil of the haughs along the Spey is very fertile, that of the other arable lands is generally thin and dry. Barely a tenth of the entire area is under the plough, and woods and plantations cover at least as much, the country around Grantown, and indeed the whole Strath of the Spey, being finely adorned with trees.

Croy.

The Parish of Croy contains the Vıllage of Clephanton, $6\frac{1}{4}$ miles south-west of Nairn. Comprises the ancient parishes of Croy and Dalcross, united in the latter part of the 15th century. Its utmost length is $10\frac{1}{4}$ miles; a varying width of $1\frac{1}{4}$ and $4\frac{5}{8}$ miles; and a land area of 22,779 acres. Croy has a Post-office under Fort-George.

Daviot.

This Parish is partly in Inverness-shire, and partly in Nairnshire, and includes the Strathnairn Valley. Its utmost length is $22\S$ miles, and its breadth $7\frac{1}{4}$ miles. The soil in some places is light and sandy, in others wet and spongy on a clay bottom. Daviot has a Post-office under Inverness.

Dores.

The Parish of Dores is situated about $6\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-west of Inverness, and has a population of 1148. Its utmost length is $15\frac{1}{8}$ miles, its breadth $4\frac{1}{4}$ miles, and its land area is 25,693 acres. Most of the and is suited only for sheep pasture, the light arable soils lying chiefly along the bottom of the valleys.

Duirinish.

A Parish in the west of Skye, containing the Village of Dunvegan, under which it has a Post-office, with money-order, savings' bank, and telegraph departments. Its greatest length is 19 miles, and its greatest breadth 16 miles, whilst its coast line, measured along the bays and headlands, is about 80 miles; and its area must be fully 100 square miles. The soil in a few tracts is clayey, and in still fewer is gravelly, in most parts being either peat moss or a mixture of peat moss and disintegrated trap.

Duthil.

This Parish contains the Village of Carr-Bridge, and the Stations of Aviemore and Boat of Garten. Its utmost length is 22½ miles, and its utmost breadth 10½ miles. The arable soil along the Spey and Dulnan is chiefly alluvial, on a deep clay bottom, that of the higher lands being thin and generally gravelly. The cultivated area, however, bears but a small proportion to moorland and deer forest.

Glenelg.

In the Parish of Glenelg there are what is called four districts, viz., Glenelg, Arnisdale, Knoydart, and Morar. The greatest length of the parish is 22 miles, its greatest breadth is 15 miles, and its land area 134,778 acres. The soil in the arable parts is loamy and fertile; about 1000 acres are regularly in tillage; about 2000 acres are under wood, and a very large area is richly pastoral for either black cattle or sheep. Glenelg has a Post office under Lochalsh.

Kilmallie.

This is the largest Parish in Scotland, contains the Burgh of Fort-William, and the Villages of North Ballachulish and Onich, in its Inverness-shire section; Ardgour, Banavie, Corpach, &c., in Argyllshire. The extreme length of the parish is $29\frac{1}{8}$ miles, and a varying width of $2\frac{5}{8}$ and $30\frac{1}{4}$ miles, and an area of $28\frac{4}{3}$,060 $\frac{1}{3}$ acres, of which 177,910 $\frac{1}{3}$ belong to Inverness-shire, and 106,150 to Argyllshire. The soil along parts of the margins of the lochs and of the bottoms of the glens is mostly light, shallow, and sandy or mossy, and on the braes and mountains is mostly moorish.

Kilmonivaig.

This Parish contains the Village of Roy-Bridge and Invergarry, and includes Strathspean, Glenroy, Glengarry, Glenquoich, &c. Its utmost length is 40½ miles, and its utmost breath is 23 miles, and has an area of 276,673½ acres, it thus being larger than Mid-Lothian, and ten other Scotch counties. The chief industry is sheep farming.

Kilmorack.

This Parish contains the village of Beauly, situated on the north bank of the river of that name. Its greatest length is 36½ miles, and its greatest breadth is 13 miles. The land area is 142,909 acres, but of this only some 4000 are arable, the rest being under wood and hill pasture. The soil in the flat about Beauly is a strong heavy clay, elsewhere in the cultivated districts it is a light stoney loam.

Kilmuir.

This Parish is divided into three districts. Kilmuir proper, Kilmaluig, and Stenscholl. The best lands form the largest continuous cultivated tract in Skye, called the Plain of Kilmuir; the next best lands are congeries of little hills, principally green, many of them isolated with small intervening glens. Less than one-sixth of the entire area is in tillage, the rest being either meadow land or hill pasture.

Kiltarlity.

This Parish is $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-west of Beauly. Its utmost length is $30\frac{1}{4}$ miles, a varying width of $3\frac{3}{2}$ furlongs to $10\frac{1}{8}$ miles, and an area of $79,579\frac{1}{3}$ acres. The soil of the arable land is generally thin, light, and of a redish colour. The chief industry is agriculture, which on the large farms is in a very advanced state. At Beaufort, there is a valuable herd of shorthorn cattle, while at Guisachan a famous herd of polled cattle is kept.

Kingussie.

This Parish contains the village of Kingussie situated near the Spey's left bank, 740 feet above the level of the sea. The capital of Badenoch, it was founded towards the close of last century by the Duke of Gordon. It has a Post-office with money order, savings' bank, and telegraph departments. The parish is 19\(^3\) miles long and 15\(^1\) miles broad, and its area is 116,182 acres. A good deal of the Speyside section is arable, but by far the greater part of the surface is mountainous and heathy. The soil of the lower arable lands is alluvial, that of the higher is mostly a light and sandy but fertile loam.

Kirkhill.

The Parish is situated between Inverness and Beauly, and has a population of 1480. Its utmost length is $7\frac{1}{8}$ miles, breadth $4\frac{3}{4}$ miles, and its area is $13,213\frac{2}{3}$ acres. The soil of the low grounds is a rich clayey loam, whilst that of the higher grounds is thin and gravelly.

Laggan.

The utmost length of this Parish is $22_{\rm s}$ miles; its utmost width $17\frac{3}{4}$ miles, and its land area 150,106 acres. The soil on the lowest grounds is alluvial, and in some parts has a depth from 10 to 12 feet. Only the bottom of the valleys and the lower hill slopes are under cultivation, by far the greater part of the Parish being occupied either as grouse moor or deer forest. Laggan is 11 miles distant from Kingussie, under which it has a Post-office.

Moy.

This Parish contains the Village of Moy, about 12 miles southeast of Inverness. The greatest length of the Parish is $26\frac{1}{2}$ miles, and the average breadth about 7 miles. Except along those portions where there are patches of alluvium, the soil is thin, clayey, or moss. About 2000 acres are under wood, from 3000 to 4000 acres are arable, and the rest is pasture. Moy has a Post-office under Inverness.

Petty.

The Parish of Petty is partly io Inverness-shire and partly in Neirnshire. The Village of Petty is situated on the Moray Firth, about 7 miles from Inverness. Its greatest length is $7\frac{1}{4}$ miles; the average breadth is about 2 miles, and the area 10,697.313 acres. The coast is low and sandy, with a very gentle slope, so that a considerable amount of foreshore is uncovered at low water. Almost the whole surface is under cultivation or woodland, but there is mossy and benty land extending probably to 1000 acres. There are about 1800 acres under wood. The soil towards the sea is light loam and clayey sand, but along the hollow, and on the south-eastern slope, it is much stronger and very fertile.

Portree.

This Parish contains the Islands of Raasay and Rona. The town of Portree, a Post town and Seaport, stands at the point where Portree Bay bends round to the southward, and though of no great size, gains importance from being the largest seat of population, and the chief business centre for Skye and the neighbouring islands. The total area of the Parish is 58,974.628 acres, including 336,734 acres of water, 1663.997 of foreshore, and 34,928 acres of tidal water. Of the total area 15,704.384 acres are in Raasay, and 2,564.905 in Rona.

Sleat.

A Parish in the S.E. of the Isle of Skye, containing the village of Isleornsay, 11 miles from Broadford, under which it has a Post-office, with money order, savings bank, and telegraph departments. The utmost length of the parish is $21\frac{1}{3}$ miles; its utmost breadth $5\frac{1}{4}$ miles and its area is 41,757 acres. The soil of much of the arable land is deep and not unproductive clay. Sleat has been termed the best wooded, the sunniest, and the most carefully cultivated part of Skye; still in the Ordnance Survey book 30,038\frac{1}{4} acres are entered as moorland, leaving less than one-fourth of the entire area for arable, green pasture, or woodland.

Snizort.

A Parish in the north of Skye, containing the Post-office villages of Skeabost and Uig. Its utmost length from north to south is 15 miles, its utmost width $8\frac{1}{4}$ miles and its area $54,285\frac{5}{8}$ acres. Much of the parish is irreclaimable waste, 47,439 acres being ranked as moorland, but much of this moorland is occupied in the rearing of black cattle. The soil of the arable grounds is principally a gravelly loam on a cold clay.

Strath.

The Parish of Strath contains the villages of Broadford and Kyleakin, and the islands of Scalpa, Pabba, and Longa. The utmost length of the parish is $19\frac{2}{3}$ miles; its breadth varies between $3\frac{1}{2}$ and $10\frac{1}{4}$ miles; and its area is 74,751 acres. According to the Ordnance Survey, 69,040 acres are moorland, leaving less than one-seventh of the entire land area for arable grounds and woodlands. Where limestone abounds the pasture is rich and luxuriant; but where the primitive rocks occur they are of a kind to yield little soil, and maintain a scanty and inferior herbage. The soil of the arable grounds is partly clay, partly black loam, and partly reclaimed moss.

Urquhart and Glenmoriston.

The whole Parish may be said to consist of two Glens—Glen-Urquhart and Glenmoriston—and has an area of 129,204.673 acres. Glen-Urquhart spreads out round Urquhart Bay in a fine semi-circular flat, and well wooded. The soil is generally light, but well cultivated. n Glenmoriston the land is light, and chiefly pasture:

Uist (South).

An Island and a Parish of the Outer Hebrides, Its greatest length is 38 miles; its greatest breadth is 8 miles; and its area is 90,099 acres. About 19,700 acres are arable, and the rest of the land is variously mountain, hill, moor, and moss. The soil on the uplands is so barren as mostly to afford but poor pasturage, and on the tracts between the uplands and the lakes is partly black loam and partly moss. The low sandy belt along the West shore is all arable, and produces, with the aid of ordinary manures, good crops of oats, barley, and potatoes.

Urray.

Containing a Hamlet of the same name, lying mostly in Ross-shire, but with a small portion also in Inverness-shire. The total area of the Parish is 74,172·794 acres; of this total there are in Inverness-shire 382,530 acres of which 25,297 are foreshore, and 7,720 tidal water, while all the rest is in Ross-shire. The soil in some parts is a good carse, clay, and elsewhere strong sand, passing to gravel, but, on the lower slopes it is warm and dry, and under good management produces fair crops.
